	Plot: Gather around the campfire. It's almost time for bed and a request is made for one last, non scary story. Perhaps an action adventure love story?

Our story begins in the middle as Thunderbird makes their decision to find the Dragon's Eye so that they can control his powers. Thunderbird is afraid they'll hurt people with his powers and the Dragon's Eye grants you wishes. They know they will need help. Who can they ask? They've been isolated for so long and have no friends to ask. Thunderbird realizes they have to ask their ex, the Sphinx.

They have a flashback to their massive public breakup at the movie theater. In public, the Thunderbird is pretty mean to others. Thunderbird does this because they can't control their powers and are afraid they will hurt someone. The Sphinx doesn't know this and is tired of them being so mean and rude and that is what sets off the fight.

Fast forward to present day and Thunderbird asks Sphinx for help. Sphinx only agrees because they love traveling and they've been dying to find the perfect piece of pizza. Thunderbird and Sphinx begin a voyage on a sailboat to find the Dragon's Eye. To pass the time they sing a quick sea shanty. They search far and wide until they come to Chicago and discover that the Dragon's Eye is in Chicago at Museum Campus, being guarded by Max the Great.

At the climax of our story, Thunderbird and Sphinx have to beat a video game, Giorgio Bros. in order to win the Dragon's Eye. They discover they are both great at playing video games. But at one moment the Sphinx is about to die in the game and the Thunderbird throws them a 2nd life power up. Giorgio Bros can't defeat them when they work together and they win the game!

At the end, the Sphinx sees that the Thunderbird isn't a monster, they were just keeping people away to keep from hurting others. They get back together, find some fantastic Chicago deep dish pizza, and then set sail and many more adventures.
